Scott Burton: Collected Writings on Art and Performance, 1965-1975 Scott Burton, David Getsy

Before gaining widespread recognition for his sculpture and public art, Scott Burton produced a substantial body of art writing in the late 1960s and early 1970s. An eclectic and wide-ranging critic, he wrote such important texts as the introduction to the groundbreaking exhibition Live in Your Head: When Attitudes Become Form and served as an editor for both ARTnews and Art in America. In these same years, Burton became known as a performance artist, developing themes he pursued in his writing. Yet, his role as an artist-critic has rarely been discussed.

Edited by David Getsy, SCOTT BURTON: COLLECTED WRITINGS ON ART AND PERFORMANCE, 1965-1975 brings together for the first time Burton's essays and unpublished manuscripts from these years, tracing his work as an art critic as well as his early statements on performance. In his writing, Burton championed positions that others held as mutually exclusive and antagonistic. He advocated for reductive abstract art while defending figuration, and he argued for the urgency of time-based and ephemeral art practices in the same years that he curated exhibitions of realist painting. Distinct in these diverse texts are Burton's increasing concerns with art's appeal to affects, empathies, and subjective responses; the early formulation of his desire to make art public and demotic; and his critical grasp on the implications and exclusions of mainstream narratives of art. This collection offers rich new context for Burton's sculptural work and reveals him as an important voice in the rapidly changing art world of the 1960s and 1970s.

Artists and movements examined include Minimalism and Postminimalism, Tony Smith, Richard Serra, Bruce Nauman, Vito Acconci, Willem de Kooning, Ralph Humphrey, Alex Katz, Donald Judd, Robert Morris, Carl Andre, Philip Pearlstein, Al Held, David Smith, Sylvia Plimack Mangold, and performance art.

Art. Art History. Art Movements: Minimalism, Postminimalism, Realism, Performance Art. Art Criticism. Performance Studies. LGBT Studies. Literary Nonfiction.
