Charles is a professor, an expatriate Brit, and a man with a past. He's done a lot of things he's not proud of, a lot of things that he misses deep inside, but can't bring himself to look for in his new life. He's put that aside, living the peaceful existence he thinks he needs. He figures he's happy. Content. Until he meets Gray Collins, that is. Gray's a student, and even though he waits until after his class with Charles ends to make his move, Charles decides not to get involved. Gray is stubborn, persisting until Charles can't resist. Gray makes Charles feel things he thought were long forgotten, and against his better judgment, Charles gives in and takes what he wants. His blossoming relationship with Gray brings Charles' past to light in a big way, testing his own resolve not to deal with it, and testing Gray's love. Will Gray be able to accept all he learns, and convince Charles to let him get as close as he wants to? Jane Davitt takes a masterful look into Charles' and Gray's lives, exploring alternative lifestyles that polite folks don't often talk about. Get wrapped up in this hot romance today!
