The Last Chapter: A Memoir Tony Whelan

As a Catholic growing up in County Down in the 1930s and 40s, Tony Whelan encountered the problems arising in a community divided along sectarian lines. But his life was enriched by youthful friendships and a love of literature and the cinema. On moving to England to become a teacher, he contracted a near-fatal illness that took years to overcome. While convalescing at home he took the first steps in a career towards literature and in 1952 went to London to work in bookselling - where he met future novelist John McGahern. They struck up a rapport which lasted until John's death in 2006. An honest and candid memoir of a "long and chequered life", Tony brings his memories to life with a wry sense of humour, recounting his friendship with John and his successes and downfalls in life. This autobiography will give pleasure to a wider public as well as making a valuable contribution to literary scholarship.
